Armed conflicts intensify social vulnerabilities and particularly place women's and girls' bodily integrity and social freedoms at risk. At the same time, women often rely on and engage with multiple networks that allow them to survive dire situations, as well as to fight for the survival of loved ones and for their ways of living.

This event creates a space for Afghan women to speak about the dramatic change in the Afghan lived reality following the Taliban takeover and their hectic departure. It will also voice stories of women who worked relentlessly in the past few days to help loved ones and colleagues to leave Afghanistan.
