A Social Minimum in the Time of Pandemic: Territorial and Extraterritorial Guarantees

In the time of pandemic, the social minimum guarantees have been rigorously tested. The global crisis has revealed numerous weaknesses and imperfections of national, regional, and international institutions and mechanisms of the realization of basic human rights that are indispensable for protecting individuals from poverty and enabling them to lead a decent life. The Minerva Center for Human Rights at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem invites you to an on-line symposium with leading international human rights scholars and practitioners, to discuss lessons that can be learned from the global emergency situation and directions for reform of local and global human rights guarantees of a social minimum.
